1.1 EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The State of Texas, by and through the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC or State), Medical and Social Services (MSS) Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (IDD) and Behavioral Health Services announces the expected availability of grant funds for State Fiscal Year (SFY) 2018 to enhance the recovery environment in Texas by funding opioid recovery support services.

This Request for Applications (RFA) will reflect the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration Center for Substance Abuse Treatment's (SAMHSA CSAT) priority for states to develop a targeted response to the opioid crisis within the Recovery-Oriented System of Care (ROSC), adhere to SAMSHA's definition of recovery, and the definition of recovery support services. In developing a response to this RFA, the respondent is encouraged to demonstrate how it currently provides, or will provide, an opioid recovery framework that is consistent with the ROSC principles.

HHSC will make funds available for organizations to deliver opioid use recovery support services to help facilitate entry of individuals into the recovery process, prevent relapse, and promote sustained recovery from opioid use disorder (OUD) statewide. It is expected that eligible respondents have the demonstrated experience, expertise, and infrastructure to perform the work outlined in this RFA.

The goal of this RFA is to encourage respondents to develop an expanded array of services within the treatment modality, to offer long-term engagement, recovery support services at pre- and post-treatment to engage and assist individuals with initiation and sustaining recovery from opioid use disorders and co-occurring substance use. This RFA is intended to ensure an informed recovery-oriented system of care in Texas for persons with OUD and co-occurring disorders. Successful respondents providing OUD treatment services will be required to align their service-orientation by supporting the development of recovery support services addressing this goal.

To be considered for award, Respondents must execute Exhibit A, Affirmations and Solicitation Acceptance, of this Solicitation and provide all other required information and documentation as set forth in this Solicitation.

- ARTICLE II. SCOPE OF GRANT AWARD

- 2.1 PROGRAM BACKGROUND

For the purpose of this RFA, the focus population for funded services includes individuals, their family members, significant others, and supportive allies, who are affected by the use and/or consequences of opioids, which may include co-occurring use of other substances, mental, and primary health conditions. This population may include men; women; pregnant women and/or women with children; individuals with criminal justice involvement; individuals who are homeless; individuals with Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS); and older adults, who are experiencing problems relative to opioid use or opioid use disorders (OUD). Funding from the Center of Substance Abuse Treatment and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Administrations for the support of the Texas Targeted Opioid Response Grant program will allow the Health and Human Services Commission to expand its treatment efforts that promote recovery for populations identified as high risk for OUD.

In recent years, there has been a significant shift in the addiction field in the understanding of what it means to recover from a substance use disorder (SUD). Spurred by emerging research and the experiences of individuals in recovery, the field is moving away from an acute care model of brief treatment episodes focused on stabilization to a long-term, sustained recovery model which encompasses the whole health and well-being of individuals. This approach required a transformation in practice and policy at the local, state, and national level. Recovery-Oriented Systems of Care (ROSC) are the framework for a long-term systems transformation. The transformation process extends beyond the treatment system to other community organizations that support individuals and families impacted by OUD. The development of additional capacity at the state and local levels for implementation of peer recovery supports are vital to responding to this crisis, particularly within agencies that have not typically offered recovery supports.

Recovery-Oriented Values and Principles

For the purpose of this RFA, respondents should consider the following recovery-oriented values and principles, and strive to ensure that their proposed service design reflects them. Each application must outline the type of services that will be provided to support recovery and the (re)establishment of a life in the community. The described services must reflect key pillars of recovery-oriented services and supports. These are:

1. Choice and Self Determination: The successful respondent will provide all participants the opportunity to select from a menu of supports and services that correspond with their personal interests and recovery goals. Participants will have opportunities to revise their selections to reflect their evolving preferences and goals. Recovery plans and service plans will reflect goals in several major life domains (See Attachment C) and will be developed in collaboration with the individuals being served.
2. Community Integration: Recovery involves a process of (re)joining and (re)building a life in the community. Participation in community activities and receiving support related to community integration has been positively correlated with recovery and should constitute a primary objective for successful respondents. Treatment organizations not only must encourage, but assist participants to identify and connect with a broad spectrum of community-based resources and supports that can assist them to achieve their goals and (re)build their lives in their community.
3. Peer Culture: Peer-to-peer supports have proven effective in promoting recovery, conveying hope, and motivating participants to pursue positive change. Successful respondents will demonstrate how they have and will continue to infuse their service environment with a peer support culture and leadership. This will include hiring recovery coaches, mobilizing peer volunteers, forming peer advisory councils, integrating peer support groups, and other peer run services, etc.

4. Family Inclusion: Family inclusion requires the active participation of recovering individuals' family members and other key supporters at all levels of the service process. Participants shall be afforded the opportunity to define their "families" broadly to include biological relatives, significant others, and other supportive allies. Based on the preference of the individuals receiving services, family members and allies will be invited to participate in service planning and offered education and support.
5. Continuity of Care: Recovery-oriented services ensure that individuals are connected to a range of continuing support services beyond a treatment episode.
6. Partnership-Consultant Relationships: In a recovery-oriented system, relationships with participants focus more on collaboration and less on hierarchy. Services are designed to empower participants to direct their own recovery. This is reflected in the collaborative treatment and service planning processes.
7. Culturally and Linguistically Competent: Culturally competent systems recognize that culture counts. There is an understanding that world views, beliefs, and customs are different and can impact the extent to which individual's access or engage in services. As a result, they can have a significant influence on recovery outcomes. Successful respondents will demonstrate that they understand and will address the varying cultural needs of the populations that they serve through their service design, staffing, and organizational policies.

For additional information about how to operationalize these concepts, respondents are referred to the Philadelphia Behavioral Health Services Transformation Practice Guidelines For Recovery and Resilience Oriented Treatment, which may be accessed at <http://www.dbhids.org/practice-guidelines/> and also the book entitled, A Practical Guide to Recovery-Oriented Practice: Tools for Transforming Mental Health Care by Larry Davidson and colleagues, Oxford University Press; 1st Edition (October 2, 2008), which can be purchased online.

Service Array

Recovery Support Services encompass a wide array of non-clinical services and supports that help individuals to initiate and sustain their recovery. Four types of support have been identified and are described below. See Attachment D – Types of Support for further details.

1. Emotional Demonstrate empathy, caring, or concern to bolster a person's self-esteem, hope and confidence.

2. Informational - Share knowledge and information and/or provide life or vocational skills training.
3. Instrumental - Provide concrete assistance to help others accomplish tasks that are connected to (re)building their life in their community.
4. Affiliational - Facilitate contact with other individuals to promote learning of social and recreational skills, create community, and acquire a sense of belonging.

The services that respondents provide should be based on the most critical needs of the target population in the respondent's community and should build on the capabilities and strengths of the respondent and staff.

Outcome and Process Measures Evaluation

1. Outcomes are an important part of all treatment services administered by HHSC. All programs approved through this RFA process will be subject to evaluation by HHSC. All awarded contracts will be subject to HHSC review throughout the course of their contract. By accepting the award under this RFA, respondents agree to comply with the evaluation requirements of HHSC. HHSC will establish a data reporting mechanism and system and awardees must agree to supply all the required data necessary for the evaluation. Successful respondents will also be required to meet all data reporting requirements established by HHSC.
2. HHSC's client record a web-based data system will collect all Awardee's data, the application must specify how the respondent plans to submit data to HHSC. Specifically, respondents must indicate that they have the technological capacity as well as the staff capability to use technology related to entering data into a web-based data system that will be designed specifically for this initiative. If applicable, the respondent should provide evidence of prior successful data submissions to HHSC.
3. Respondents are also asked to include a job description for each of the staff person(s) assigned to meet evaluation requirements, including but not limited to level of education, experience, background, and proportion of time assigned to evaluation activities. If the application includes existing or new position(s) to address evaluation activities, the position(s) are to be reflected in the respondent's budget application.
4. The evaluation component designed by HHSC will consist of both outcome and process measures. The outcome component will assess the immediate effects that the program has on the individuals receiving the service. The purpose is to learn about short-term changes in participants' knowledge, attitudes, beliefs, or actual behavior, and to determine whether the service goals are met. Baseline information will be collected on these measures when an individual begins to receive the recovery support services, and follow-up assessments will be carried out at 3, 6, 9, and 12-month intervals to measure change as a result of the services.

5. Additional Requirements Related to Evaluation: Surveys will be available in both Spanish and English formats and in other languages as determined by the respondent and the needs of the population being served. The respondent must keep all participant surveys in a file for HHSC review.
6. HHSC will collect to measure program and performance outcomes. These measures are subject to change and do not comprise the entire array of measures that may be required of the contractor. See Attachment E - Outcome Measures for further details.

Process Measures

Process measures are designed to explore the extent to which services are being delivered in the manner that the respondent originally proposed and to assess the services being provided. The respondent must recruit and screen recovery coach applicants and other peer volunteer workers, and supervise their areas of work. As the process measures are specific to the kinds of services and supports that are provided, HHSC will partner with the respondent to define process measures that are relevant to the respondent's project.
